

Evening Telegraph

SATURDAY, AUGUST 27, 1864.

SPIRIT OF THE NEW YORK PRESS,

Leading Editorials from the New York Papers This Morning.

THE CRISIS OF THE COUNTRY.

One would imagine, to listen to much of the talk which is heard about the call for 500,000 men, and the draft which is likely to follow it, that a raising of men for the United States army was the curse of most of an Eastern town; that the war was being carried on for the anti-slavery gratification of the President and the Cabinet; and that everybody knew it in his family and friends to demand of them their pay by every conceivable means.The Citizen of Boston, in its article on "A Host of Friends," says:

—The chancery have decreased, in number, in Switzerland so considerably that in some of the cantons it has been forbidden to bury them for three years, under a very penalty.

—Mr. John Bright has been annoying himself by catching salmon near Teignmouth Lodge.

—The East Indian to carry, after a long period of existence, now shows a balance of $93,000 in its favor.

—Dr. Livingstone, the African explorer, is now reported to be in London, England, the residence of his early associate and friend, Mr. James Young.

—The chancery have decreased, in number, in Switzerland so considerably that in some of the cantons it has been forbidden to bury them for three years, under a very penalty.

—The Rev. Mr. Pinxterhoven, of Exeter, having quarreled with his wife, ran away from her with his servant, col. Edward G. Smith, and carried off a quantity of gold plate to pay expenses, God knows at Exeter's gate checked.

—The Credit Foncier of Paris has advanced to individual companies and provincial authorities, less than $6,000,000. In fact, since its organization, two years ago, it has advanced to the amount of $10,000,000 francs, or $2,000,000.

—It is a nice thing to have been a Chancellor in England. Four of the ex-financiers received a pension of twenty thousand dollars a year, Lord Brougham, St. Leonards, Cranworth, and Chelmsford.

—The Powers which beset France, have as yet recognized the Empire of Mexico, and whose minister resides in the capital of that country, are Austria, Bavaria, Prussia, Russia, Belgium, and Holland.

—On hearing of the result of the decision of the House of Lords, in the case of Theresa Verville, the family of the Major gave a grand entertainment at their seat at Belgrave, Middlesex, and refreshments were provided on a large scale gratis.

—In a report made to the British Government by Morchison, the geologist, it appears that Great Britain yields yearly nearly eight million tons of iron ore, and the total product amounts annually to about eighty-three and a half million tons, the estimate ranging from eighteen to twenty-one millions sterling.

—In delivering one of the Cantor lectures, Dr. Grace Calvert alluded to the subject of Merton's gestation used so much in China in the preparation of soap. These curious gelatinous products are not only considered great delicacies in India and China, but even in Europe, where they are popular.

—The Edinburgh papers report that the "Society of the Ancient Archers of Kilmarnock" proposed a Scotch bonnet as a gift to the Prince of Wales, who succeeds his father as person of state.

—The shape of the bonnet is like that of a helmet.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

—They seem to consider their relations with the Executive something like those of a tribe with a chief, and they are like children with a master.

—But is this democratic? Is it a republican?

—It is the way that loyal men ought to stand by the best Government the world over saw!

—Does any one suppose that this war can end naturally? That we may be put in ruin, if the men whom the people have chosen to lead us, are not fit to do so?

FOREIGN JOTTINGS.

—The summit of Mount Diana may be reached from Chamounix in a single day.

—On the 1st Saturday of July the temperature in Paris was 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

—Mr. John Bright has been annoying himself by catching salmon near Teignmouth Lodge.

—The East Indian to carry, after a long period of existence, now shows a balance of $93,000 in its favor.

—Dr. Livingstone, the African explorer, is now reported to be in London, England, the residence of his early associate and friend, Mr. James Young.

—The Powers which beset France, have as yet recognized the Empire of Mexico, and whose minister resides in the capital of that country, are Austria, Bavaria, Prussia, Russia, Belgium, and Holland.

—The chancery have decreased, in number, in Switzerland so considerably that in some of the cantons it has been forbidden to bury them for three years, under a very penalty.

—The Rev. Mr. Pinxterhoven, of Exeter, having quarreled with his wife, ran away from her with his servant, col. Edward G. Smith, and carried off a quantity of gold plate to pay expenses, God knows at Exeter's gate checked.

—The Credit Foncier of Paris has advanced to individual companies and provincial authorities, less than $6,000,000. In fact, since its organization, two years ago, it has advanced to the amount of $10,000,000 francs, or $2,000,000.

—It is a nice thing to have been a Chancellor in England. Four of the ex-financiers received a pension of twenty thousand dollars a year, Lord Brougham, St. Leonards, Cranworth, and Chelmsford.

—The Powers which beset France, have as yet recognized the Empire of Mexico, and whose minister resides in the capital of that country, are Austria, Bavaria, Prussia, Russia, Belgium, and Holland.

—The chancery have decreased, in number, in Switzerland so considerably that in some of the cantons it has been forbidden to bury them for three years, under a very penalty.

—The Rev. Mr. Pinxterhoven, of Exeter, having quarreled with his wife, ran away from her with his servant, col. Edward G. Smith, and carried off a quantity of gold plate to pay expenses, God knows at Exeter's gate checked.

—The Credit Foncier of Paris has advanced to individual companies and provincial authorities, less than $6,000,000. In fact, since its organization, two years ago, it has advanced to the amount of $10,000,000 francs, or $2,000,000.

—It is a nice thing to have been a Chancellor in England. Four of the ex-financiers received a pension of twenty